NORTH ALBANY

Best for: Families prioritizing school ratings and newer construction.

Price range: $450,000–$650,000. Homes built primarily 2000–2024, larger lots, modern finishes.

School note: Properties in Benton County sections access Corvallis School District — one of Oregon's highest-rated. Always verify county and school zone for specific addresses.

Trade-off: Highest prices on the Albany market. Some sections lack walkability infrastructure.

HISTORIC DOWNTOWN (MONTEITH & HACKLEMAN DISTRICTS)

Best for: Buyers who want walkability, character, and community.

Price range: $320,000–$480,000. Victorian and Craftsman homes, many on the National Register.

Highlights: Walking distance to Albany Farmers Market, Willamette riverfront path, downtown restaurants and coffee.

Trade-off: Older homes require more maintenance. Limited garage space on some lots.

KNOX BUTTE

Best for: Move-up buyers and OSU/Corvallis commuters who want newer construction at below-North-Albany prices.

Price range: $390,000–$520,000. Homes built 2008–2024, generous lots (6,500–9,000 sq ft), craftsman style.

Highlights: Easy I-5 access, quiet cul-de-sac streets, Cascade views, newer infrastructure.

Trade-off: No Corvallis School District access. Less walkable than Downtown.

SOUTH ALBANY & PERIWINKLE

Best for: First-time buyers, value-focused buyers, and buyers who want established neighborhoods.

Price range: $280,000–$380,000. Ranch homes, mid-century construction, mature trees and canopy.

Highlights: Most affordable entry point in the city, established community feel, proximity to Linn County services.

Trade-off: Older homes, some deferred maintenance common. Less new construction available.

OAK CREEK

Best for: Families wanting new construction at a more accessible price than North Albany.

Price range: $380,000–$540,000 resale; new construction $445,000–$540,000.

Highlights: Active new construction, energy-efficient builds, smart home features, Timber Linn Park proximity.

Trade-off: No Corvallis School District access. Some sections still under development.
